

February 25, 2010

Subsidized Renters at The Edge Getting Antsy

Along with a pretty picture gallery showing the just-about-completed construction at The Edge in Williamsburg (which got FHA approval at the end of last year), Curbed reports that there some grouching among the ranks of the lucky renters who won the lottery last year for a below-market-rate apartment in the upscale waterfront complex. Seems that they were under the impression that they could move in last month. Not the case, says Edge management, March was always the plan, though they'd thought there was a chance of moving the subsidized renters in early. The hold-up? Seems DOB hasn't coughed up to C of O yet.

Photo by Will Femia